WARD BOSS vs. TRUCK DRIVER

Both men pleaded guilty to charges of disturbing the peace, after being booked by Police Chief, Gerry Doherty. Reidy was released on bail put up by corporation lawyer, Edmund O'Callaghan. French remained in city jail over night, sharing his cell with Chandler Davis, numbers racket czar.

The argument started when Reidy, ward boss in the South End, claimed French was charging him too much to transport hired voters to various polling places about the district. French told him that since the work was not quite lawful he must have a higher fee. Patrolmen Herbert Colcord and Paul Brine stepped in to prevent bloodshed, while a fellow policeman phoned headquarters.
